Subrecipient vs Contractor

- Subrecipients may exercise discretion in making program decisions and carrying out program activities, while contractors cannot.
- Contractors are responsible for complying only with those requirements and conducting those activities that the recipient or subrecipient specifies in their contracts.

Subrecipient Characteristics

- Makes determinations about who is eligible to receive what assistance;
- Has its performance measured in relation to whether objectives of the program were met (e.g. is accountable for meeting HUD-established performance measures);
- Has responsibility for programmatic decision making;
- Is responsible for adherence to applicable requirements in the program regulations and HUD's grant agreement with the recipient; and
- Uses the program funds to carry out a portion of a subrecipients' program for a public purpose specified in the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act (e.g. the benefit of homeless individuals and families and individuals and families at risk of homelessness), as opposed to providing goods or services for the benefit of the subrecipient.

Contractor Characteristics

- Provides the goods and services within normal business operations;
- Provides similar goods or services to many different purchasers;
- Operates in a competitive environment;
- Provides goods or services that are ancillary to the operation of the HUD funded programs; and
- Is held to the terms of the contract rather than the compliance requirements of the HUD funded programs.

Example 1: Rental Assistance

- A contractor—organization's sole responsibility is to write and mail rent checks to landlords for program participants on whose behalf rental assistance is paid under the HUD Funded Program.
- A subrecipient—operating a Rapid Re-housing project on behalf of the recipient (RTFH) and the recipient provides the subrecipient with the authority to make decisions about items such as: project design; eligibility requirements for the project; conducting its own intakes and assessments; and writing its own rent checks to landlords or contracting out for that service.

Example 2: Legal Services

- A contractor—organization provides limited legal services only to those program participants designated to receive legal services by the emergency shelter provider.
- A subrecipient—organization: identifies its own program participants; completes its own intake and assessment of program participants; and determines and carries out the legal services it believes are required by the program participant.

Example 3: Prevention Program

- A contractor—organization provides limited prevention services only to those program participants designated to receive eviction prevention services by the homeless service provider.
- A subrecipient—organization: identifies its own program participants; completes its own intake and assessment of program participants; and determines and carries out the prevention activity it believes are required by the program participant.

In preparation for the release of the YHDP request for proposal, RTFH recommend that potential applicants review information about the roles and responsibilities of being a subrecipient of HUD YHDP funding; as well as the implementation and compliance with Continuum of Care funding requirements. Accessing these resources does not guarantee you a YHDP award but helps potential applicants review basic information that may be useful in response to the soon to be released RFP.
